PHILLYJUNK.COM IS FIRST TO SUPPORT EDUCATION AND ORGANIZATION NAPO-GPC AND PHILLYJUNK.COM RAISE THE PROFESSIONAL BAR

The National Association of Professional Organizers' annual national conference is the highlight of many Professional Organizers' year. The purpose of the conference is to educate professional organizers on the latest trends, techniques, and discoveries in the field. Attendance raises the bar for professional standards and the value professional organizers bring to their clients. However, the recession has made attendance a financial challenge for some small business owners.

In steps Marty Ingram, Owner of PhillyJunk.com and a Corporate Associate Member of the National Association of Professional Organizers - Greater Philadelphia Chapter (NAPO-GPC). In late August, PhillyJunk.com fully funded the first NAPO-GPC/PhillyJunk.com 2012 Scholarship Program. The scholarship allows one chapter member to go to the annual conference, all expenses paid. Scholarship applications are due December 1, 2011, and applying members can find scholarship guidelines on www.napo-gpc.org.

NAPO-GPC is a non-profit organization whose mission is to educate members, promote the highest stands of ethics and professional competence, and raise public awareness about the benefits of organizing. Members of NAPO-GPC improve the lives of their residential and business clients by organizing their surroundings, creating systems and processes, and transferring skills so clients learn to stay organized.

PhillyJunk.com has a very simple business model. They provide residential and commercial junk removal with exemplary customer service. In addition to funding the NAPO-GPC/PhillyJunk.com 2012 Scholarship, Ingram has found other creative ways to give back. Marty has turned the maxim, "One man's trash is another man's treasure" into a way to invest in his community. Employees use company time and vehicles to find deserving homes for gently used furniture and accessories their clients no longer need.

Together NAPO-GPC and PhillyJunk.com have created a wonderful program that improves the professional life of the scholarship recipient, raises the bar for the professional community, and increases the benefits countless future clients will receive.
